ACTION JACKSON

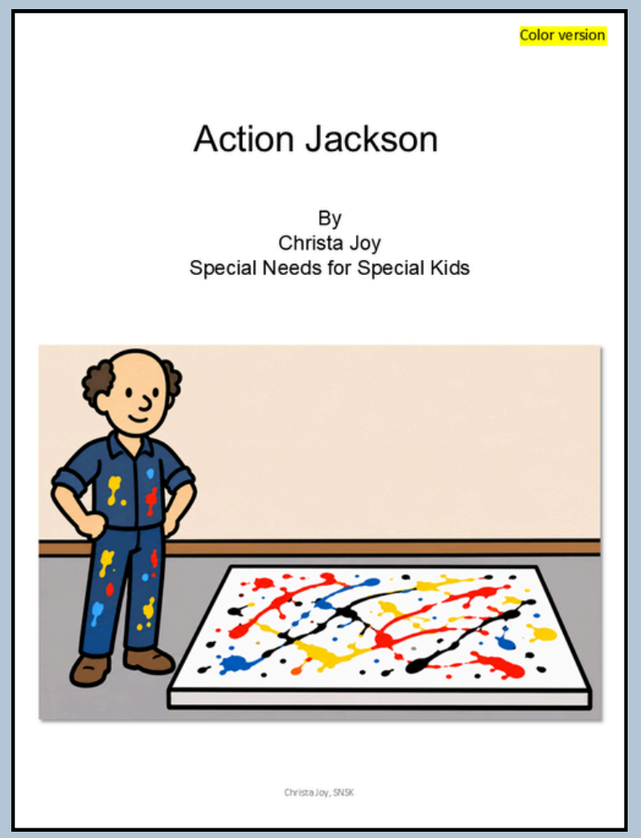

6 ACTIVITIES
PRINT & DIGITAL

Special Needs for Special Kids

These literacy units are something I created and started using in my classroom. I had students with significant challenges and most were non-readers. This is a great way to expose all students to some great books.

This unit includes 6 activities to accompany this book, enough to last a full week of instruction.

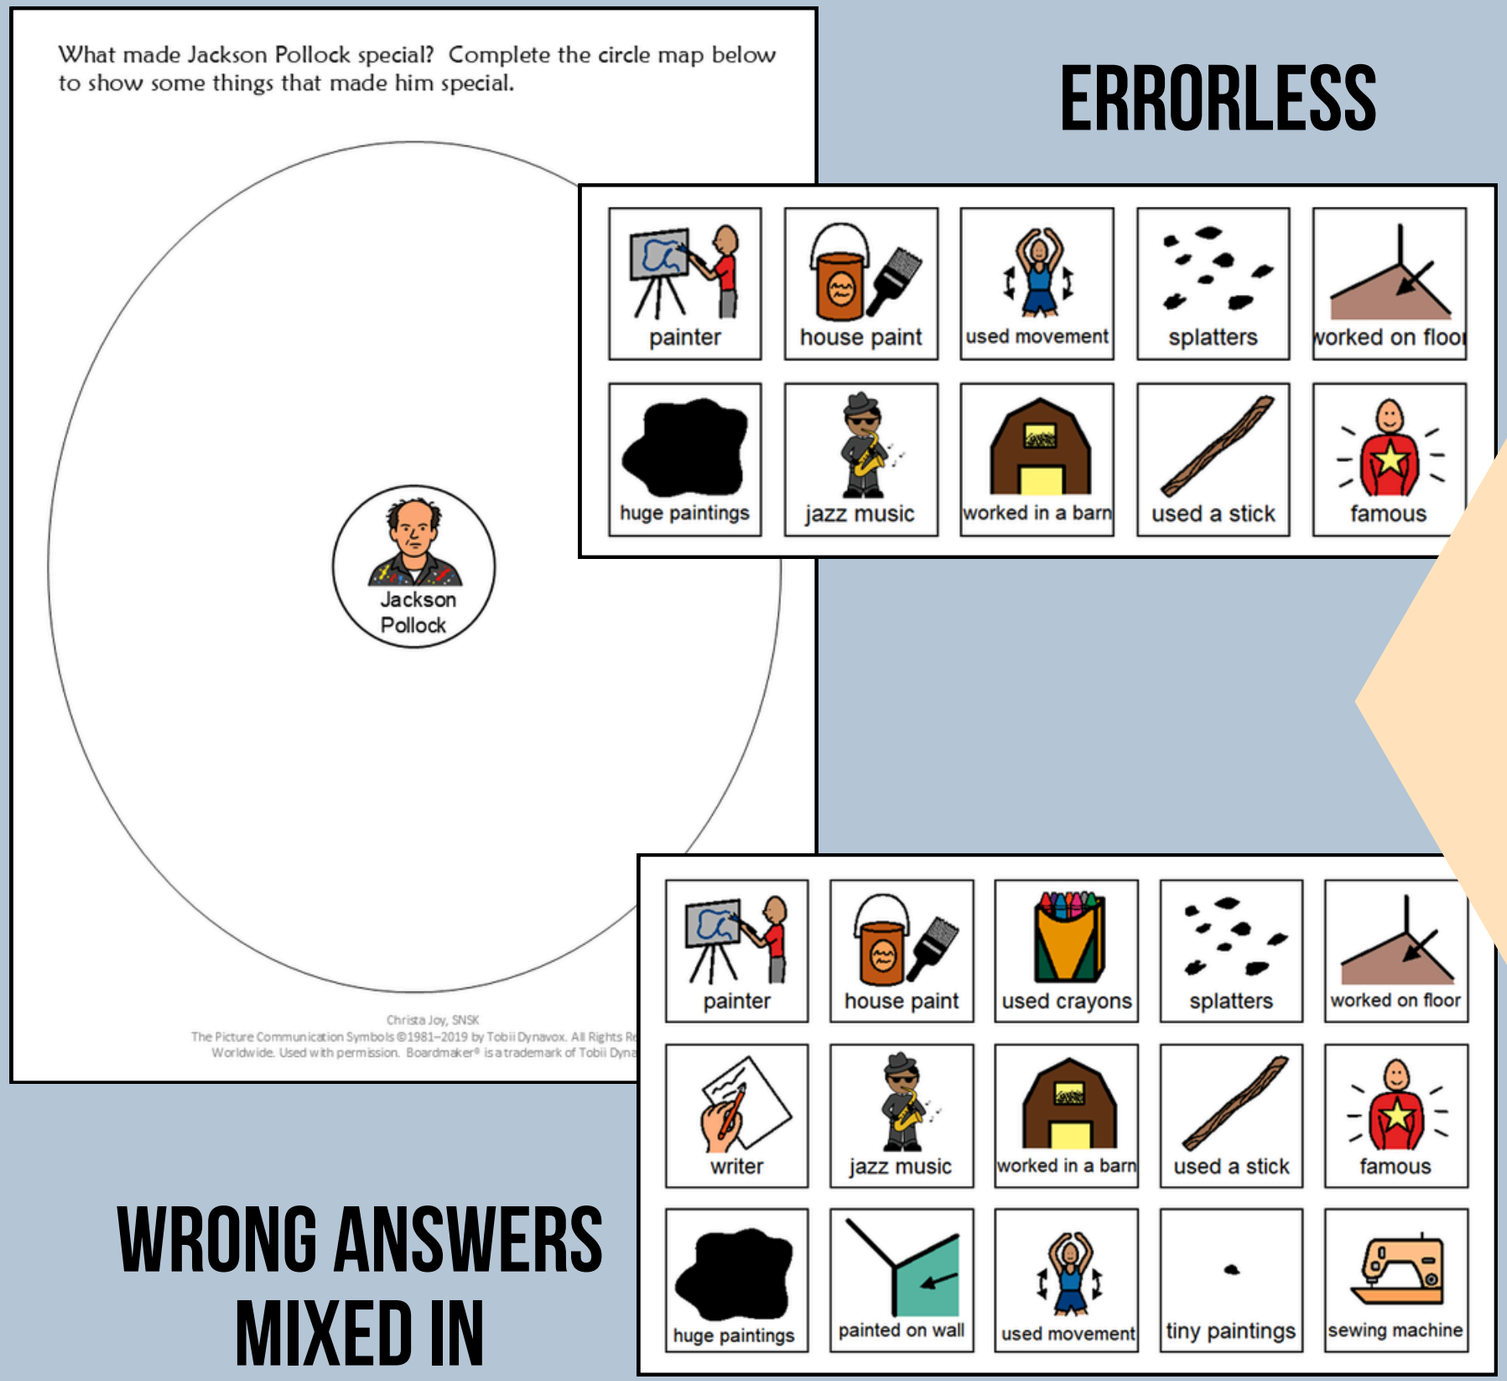

This unit comes with a storyboard.

Storyboards are great for ALL students to assist with participation and engagement in group discussions.

Tips on how to use in the unit!!

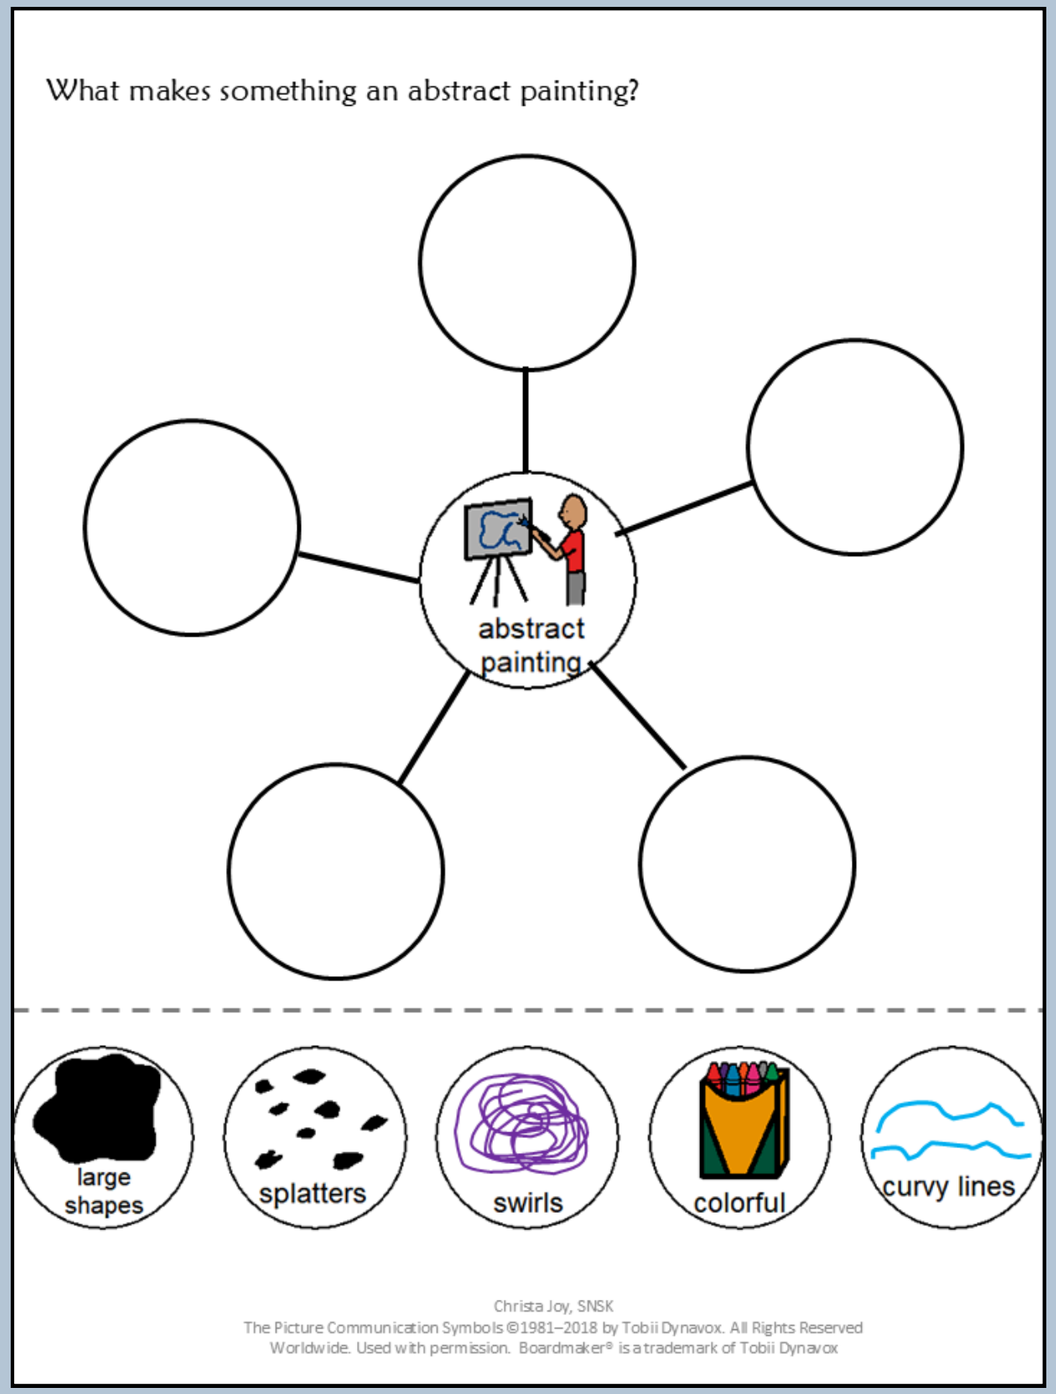

ERRORLESS

WRONG ANSWERS MIXED IN

There is a circle map about Jackson Pollock.

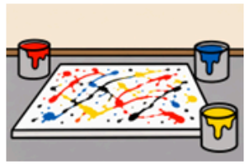

There is an option containing correct answers and another containing wrong answers mixed in.

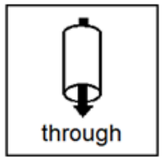

There is a word map about abstract paintings.

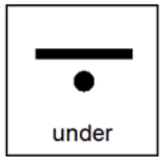

This is an errorless activity.

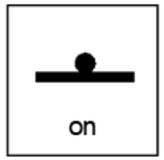

Match the correct preposition with each picture.

The canvas was on the floor. 	The light was above the easel.
The paint goes through a funnel. 	The paintbrush is under the table.
The stick is in the can. 	The painter stood next to the canvas.

There is a matching activity: match the preposition to each picture.

Students will sort examples of large and small movements.

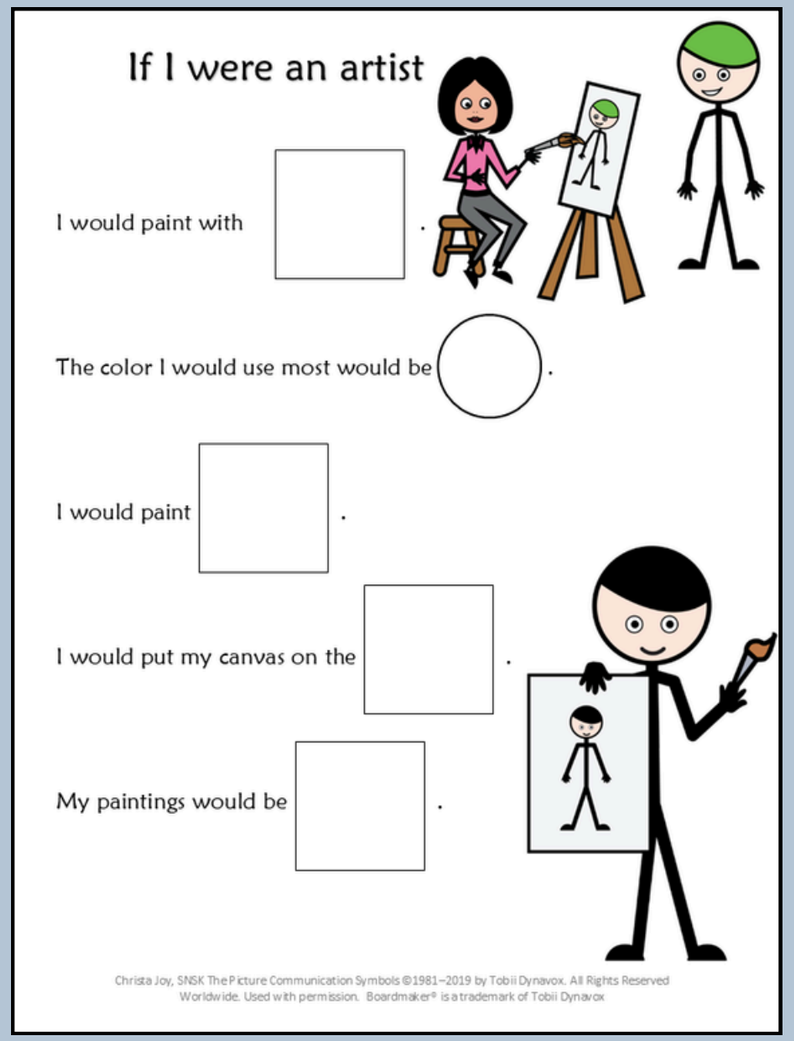

My Abstract Painting

- Students will get a chance to create their own abstract painting.
- Options:
  - Students can make their own. I would do this outside. Encourage students to use unconventional tools.
  - For students to use more structure, use the attached template.
    - Print on cardstock for more durability, or mount on a piece of cardboard.
    - Encourage students to use unconventional tools.
- Encourage students to add their signature to their finished painting once dry.
- These would make a great bulletin board display.

Students will create their own abstract painting.

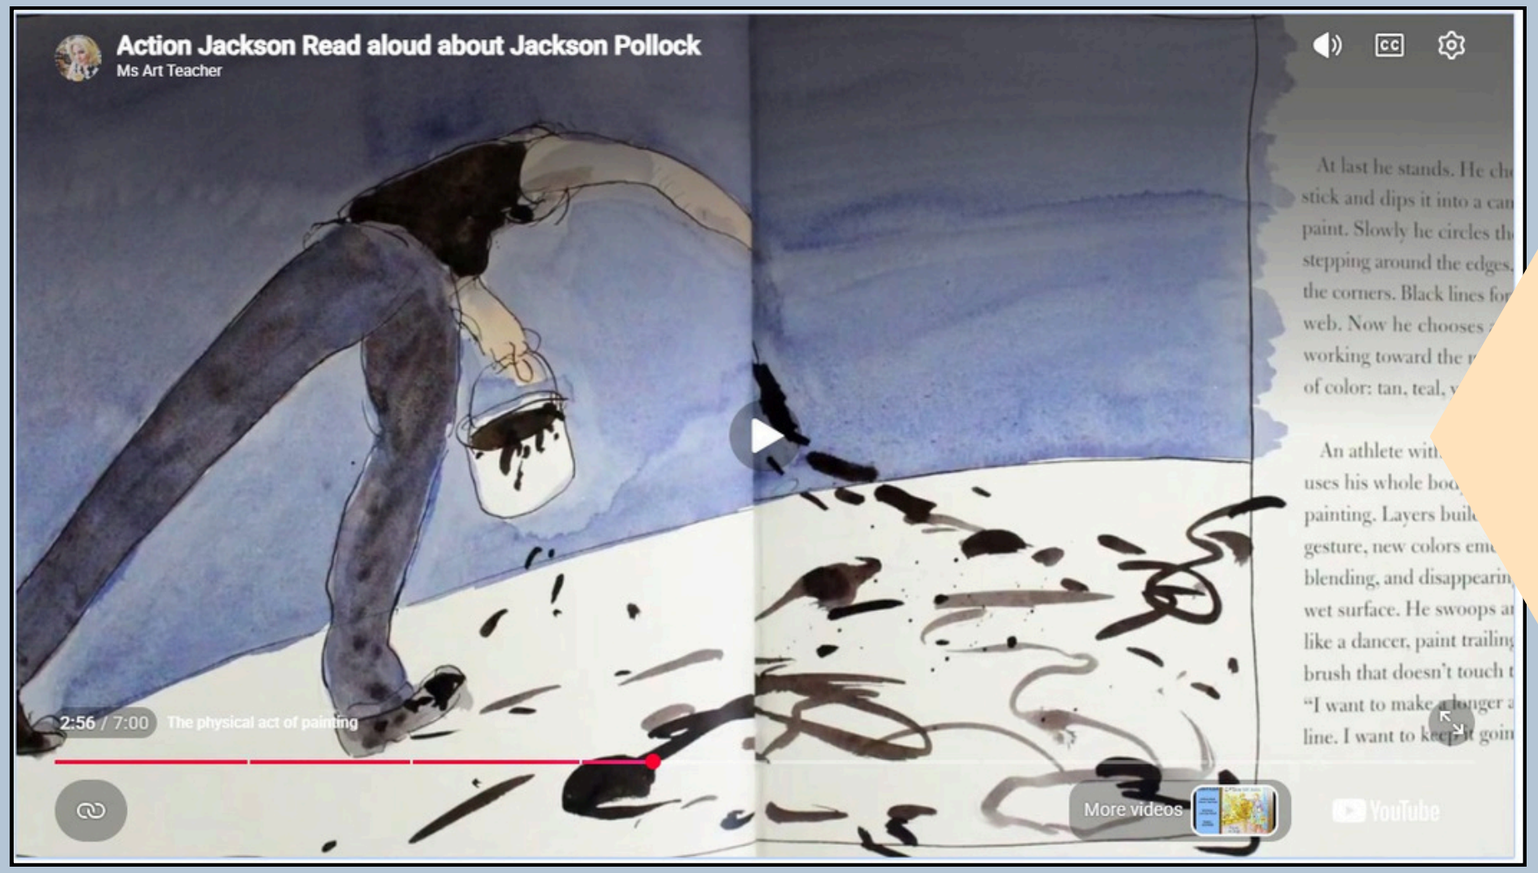

A template is included for students who need additional structure.

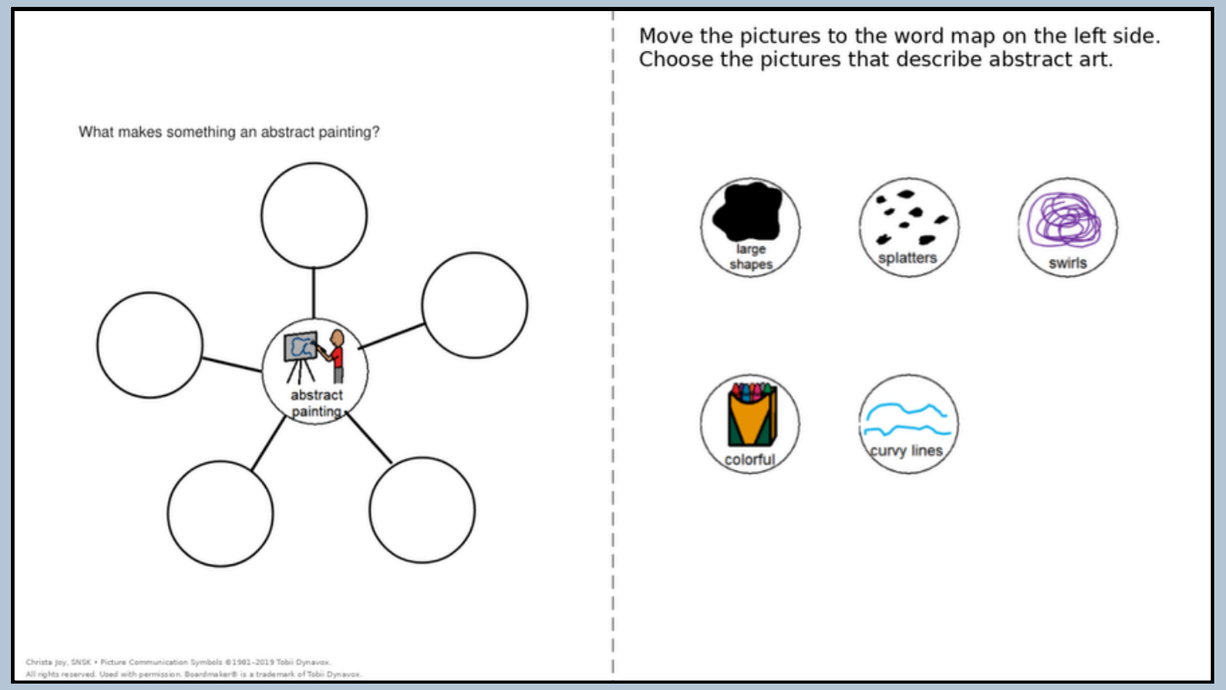

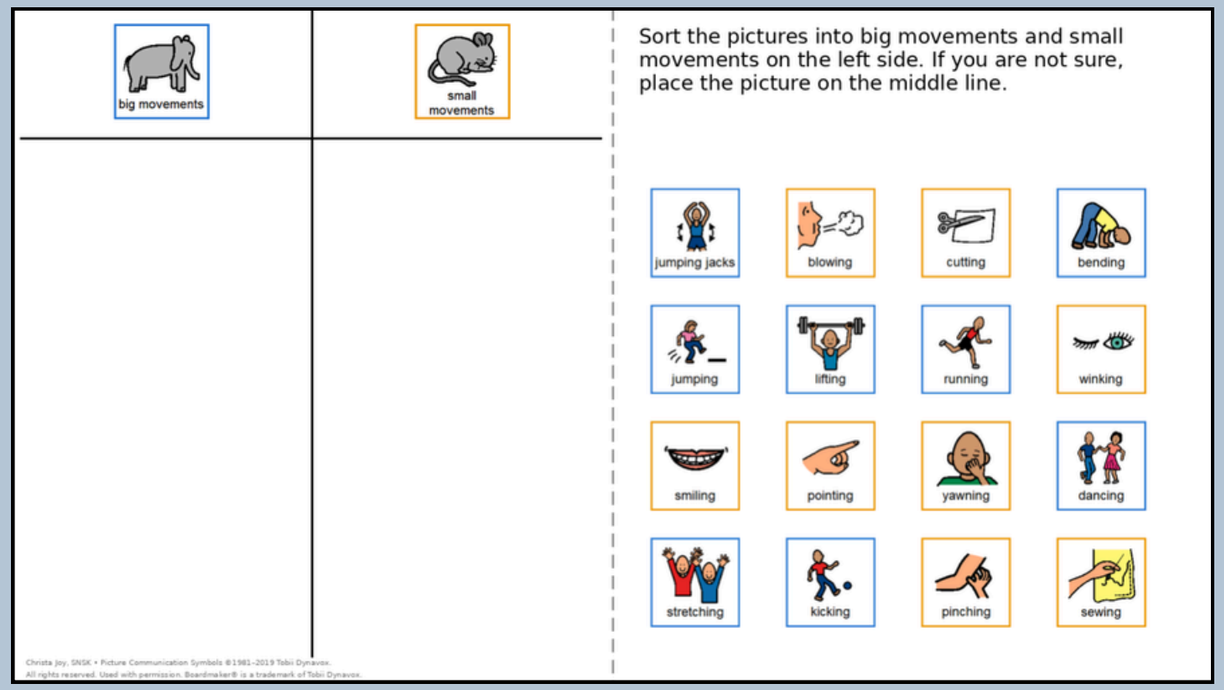

Students will write a story about being an artist.

This is an errorless activity that allows students to write their own story independently.

There is a video of the book read aloud. This is a video from YouTube.

There are digital versions of the activities included. Students click and drag the answers.
